

The Cervantes Group Press Release

Subject: The Cervantes Group opens new office in Madrid

Madrid, Spain., January 4th, 2014 The Cervantes Group, one of the fastest growing IT Consulting and Talent Acquisition organizations in the United States in the last five years, now has brought multi-lingual and multi-cultural Technology Services to major global customers by establishing base in Spain. “We are premiering our new office in Madrid, Spain to meet and greet our customers with all the professionalism and expertise they expect from us. They deserve it and we are happy to finally be in Europe” exclaimed Joanna Bauza, President and Co-Founder of The Cervantes Group and Spanish citizen as well.

Since its inception in 2004, The Cervantes Group has experienced rapid growth, in part by the high demand for skilled professionals in both very old core technologies and amazingly new front-end development technologies, being bilingual or multilingual, and obviously for impeccable management with key customers who have these needs. Today, The Cervantes Group has offices in Boston, Chicago, San Juan and now opened up the market in Europe by installing its business center in Madrid, Spain.

The site chosen is located in an elegant and very popular area of Madrid with quick access to the M-30 highway in the “Centre Breaña building. The office and has different opulant green and red colors in the hallways and clear, blue and orange inside the office characterizing the site as serious and fun at the same time. The building has been newly renovated but what gives joy to the team is the Japanese garden inside and a little Bonsai and both the two founders and innovators Joanna Bauza and Tim Mullen are comfortable. “A very important philosophy that we have developed is to ensure that both employees and customers are comfortable and know that can continue to rely on our services for years to come. See you soon over here”, says Joanna Bauza.
