Subject: The Cervantes Group Reiterates their Commitment to Puerto Rico

San Juan, PR – October 20th, 2017 After one month from the imminent hit of Hurricane Maria to Puerto Rico the island is still scrambling for help from the mainland USA. Many sectors of the Island still do not have access to clean water, electricity, or communications. The Cervantes Group mobilized to attend the crisis. Our Managing Partner, Tim Mullen, arrived to Puerto Rico on October 18, 2017 with 4 suitcases full of “Post Maria supplies” such as batteries, water, fans, power banks, flashlights, bagels, granola bars, among others items.

On October 19, 2017 The Cervantes team visited over eight companies and colleagues to deliver Post Hurricane Maria care packages for their teams and employees. “The expressions on their faces were worth a thousand words”, mentioned Mullen, “It was the least that we could do”. While Mr. Mullen talked individually with each company the magnitude of the catastrophe was evident. Not only did The Cervantes team deliver the much needed supplies, but reiterated their commitment with the companies, people, and all of Puerto Rico. Although the Hurricane hit the island hard the perseverance of its strong people continues to shine and prove that it’s possible to rebuild the island.

The CEO of The Cervantes Group, Joanna Bauzá, commented on the situation on the island, “I congratulate you for all the effort, determination and hard work. Trust me that every small step is going to make a difference. I look forward to do more in the upcoming weeks. Together we will achieve it.”
